

Wykład honorowy Honorary lecture

See the invisible –
the quest of imaging vitreous

J. Sebag

MD, FACS, FRCOphth, FARVO

Senior Research Scientist, Doheny Eye Institute, UCLA

Professor of Clinical Ophthalmology, Stein Eye Institute,

Geffen School of Medicine, UCLA

Founding Director, VMR Institute for Vitreous Macula Retina

A graduate of the Bronx High School of Science, Columbia, and Harvard, Dr. Sebag is considered a world-leading authority on vitreous. At present, he is Senior research Scientist at the Doheny Eye Institute in Pasadena and Professor of Clinical Ophthalmology at UCLA in Los Angeles, California. As of 2022, Dr. Sebag has authored 248 academic publications and delivered an equal number of lectures on various aspects of vitreo-retinal health and disease. His Google Scholar H-index = 53. A 1983-84 fellow of the John Simon Guggenheim Foundation and currently a fellow of the American College of Surgeons and the Royal College of Ophthalmologists (UK), Dr. Sebag has delivered 68 named and invited lectures throughout the world, including the 2019 Inaugural Robert Machemer Keynote lecture to the European Society of Ophthalmology. He has also recorded 2 lectures for the Henry Stewart Talks, based in England. In 2005, Dr. Sebag was inducted as a member of the venerable and prestigious American Ophthalmological Society, chairing the program committee in 2016. In 2010, Dr. Sebag was selected as a Fellow of ARVO, the world's premier eye research organization. He has received more than 2 dozen awards from national and international organizations, including the American Academy of Ophthalmology who accorded Dr. Sebag the Senior Career Achievement Award in 2018. Dedicated to advancing our understanding and management of vitreous, Dr. Sebag has conducted research in this area since 1978 and recently published a 925-page book addressing the role of vitreous in health & disease that has had 173,000 downloads.